WISH OF MAYOR IS HOLIDAY FOR EVERY WORKER

Issues Labor Day Proclamation Requesting That Business Be Suspended Generally on September 4.

Mayor Henry Westerfeld's Labor Day proclamation, passed yesterday, conveys the request that business generally be suspended on that day, September 4. The mayor made the sweeping request that those in no hurry shut the doors of all places where workmen are employed.

Here is the proclamation:

A custom upheld by the years, cherished in the hearts of the people, and universally recognized throughout the United States as a distinct tribute to the dignity of labor and an honor to the workman, has been that of setting one day apart in each year, upon which the entire nation may observe the thankfulness and gratitude due to those who labor.

It is indeed fitting that this custom should be perpetuated. That on one occasion each year the wheels of industry and commerce may cease their endless revolutions. Thus the men of brain and brawn and muscle, who daily are toiling and striving in mill and shop and factory forever to assist American supremacy in the world, shall have an opportunity to take three days off the work bench and enjoy a day dedicated to them by common consent.

Within the boundaries of the city of Albuquerque live hundreds of contented, well paid working men, who labor every working day of their lives to support themselves and their families, to provide for their children a better education, and to create for them greater opportunities than were possible for them in the days of their youth.

Recognizing the importance of the working man's participation in the upbuilding of Albuquerque, this honored assembly, interested in the welfare of their trades and crafts to the number, and believing that the entire city should assist in the celebration of a holiday set aside as a tribute to the working man, I, Henry Westerfeld, mayor of the city of Albuquerque, by the power in me vested, do hereby declare Monday, September 4, 1916, a public holiday in the city, and earnestly request business generally suspend, and that those in authority in banks, business houses, mills and shops, and all other places where workmen are employed, close their doors on that day and permit their employees to enjoy a day of uninterrupted recreation and recreation among their fellow men.

Done at the City Hall of the city of Albuquerque Saturday, August 26, 1916. HENRY WESTERFIELD, Mayor of the City of Albuquerque.

THOMAS HUGHES, City Clerk.
